Hello Charter School Enthusiasts! It is hard to believe that the 4th of July is in the rearview mirror as we barrel towards another school year. These are examples of the resources that HUB brings to the charter schools in our HUB Charter School Practice.

From our perch, we continue to have many discussions with charters about attraction and retention of valuable employees. Classroom Decoration Safety

Teachers decorate their classrooms for a variety of reasons. A bright bulletin board can increase student enthusiasm for a new unit, holiday themes can harness excitement for learning, and a generally fun, decorated classroom is one in which students will be more eager to learn. Decorations can be purely ornamental or they can be focused on units of study, but they must always be safe. Even well-intentioned decorations could pose serious risks to students if used incorrectly. Click here to read about the risks and tips to decorate your classroom safely.

Data on School Shootings

With this tracker, Education Week aims to provide a clear accounting of K-12 school shootings. There is no single right way of calculating numbers like this, and the human toll in the immediate aftermath and long term is impossible to measure. We hope to provide reliable information to help inform discussions, debates, and solutions. Click here to see the map of school shootings and learn more.
